How do I receive Lobster?

You must make arrangements with your registered Fisher on how you will receive your lobster.

How much lobster should I receive from a Fisher?

The NRD estimates that a tag is worth approximately 20lbs over a 14-day fishery.

Can I still get lobster from the Community Distribution Line-up or Register for Elder Delivery?

No. When you register for a tag, you will be unable to receive lobster through the community distribution line. In addition, if you are an elder who receives a tag, you cannot receive elder's delivery.

Why a tag system?

The Natural Resources Directorate manages the lobster fishery by monitoring "fishing effort". Fishing effort is measured by the amount of lobster traps in the water for a given period of time. To control effort, there must be a limited amount of traps in the water and each trap in the water must be marked with a registered tag. The Listuguj Rangers will remove a trap without a registered tag and the fisher will be held accountable. The effort allocated to the 2019 fall season is 235 traps over a 14-day period.

Why receive a tag?

Community members prefer to receive lobster directly from fishers, avoiding the community distribution line-up.

Can I sell my tag?

Since 2018, the NR department have distributed the effort (amount of traps) equally amongst the registered Fishers. Therefore, Fishers no longer need to purchase tags to fish, as they will receive an equal portion of tags. However, community members can sell the lobster they receive if they choose not to eat it.
